Summary:

The book Stray Birds is one of the greatest creations of Rabindranath Tagore. Because of his profoundly sensitive, fresh and beautiful verse, he won the Nobel Prize in Literature 1913. He shows his love for nature, like day and night, oceans and streams, the interpersonal relationship, like romance and friendship, in between words he deliberates. Metaphor is widely applied to compare the relation of human and the linkage with wildlife. The book has only 27 pages; you may doubt how much we can see. Every simple word in the book means an ocean, a universe which you will be attached.

Comment:

Human nature is the main aspect featured in the book and there're still many aspects the book has covered. Every masterpiece is a story of our life. The book isn't anything ordinary but when we read it with our heart, to feel every word, we can join Tagore in his world. His world where peaceful and freedom can be found.

'Light that plays, like a naked child, among green leaves happily, knows not that man can lie.'
